

CONTENTS.

ESSAY I.

ON A MAN'S WRITING MEMOIRS OF HIMSELF.

LETTER I.

Affectionate interest with which we review: •: to our past life—It deserves a brief record for our own use—Very few things to be noted of the multitude that have occurred—Direction and use of such a review as would be required for writing a Memoir—Importance of our past life considered as the beginning of an endless duration of existence—General deficiency of self-observation—Oblivion of the greatest number of our past feelings—Occasional glimpses of vivid recollection—Associations with things and places—The different and unknown associations of different persons with the same places.....PAGE
1

LETTER II,

All past life an education—Discipline and influence from—direct instruction—companionship—books—scenes of nature—and the state of society...
.....p. 5

LETTER III.

Very powerful Impressions sometimes from particular facts, tending to form discriminated characters—Yet very few strongly discriminated and individual characters found—Most persons belong to general classes of character—Immense number and diversity of impressions, of indefinitely various tendency, which the moral being has undergone in the course of life—Might be expected that such a confusion of influences would not permit the formation of any settled character—That such a character is, nevertheless, acquired and maintained, is owing to some one leading determination, given by whatever means, to the mind, generally in early life—Common self-deceptive belief that we have maintained rectitude, and the exercise of sound reason, under the impressions that have been forming our charactersp.
14

LETTER IV.

Most of the influences under which the characters of men are forming—unfavourable to wisdom, virtue, and happiness—Proof of this if a number of persons suppose